The National Association of Caribbean-American Journalists is non-profit organization for Caribbean-American journalists, journalism professors, public relations professionals and student journalists in the United States of America and the Caribbean. NACA J provides ongoing professional educational and networking opportunities to members and advocates for visibility for the regional and international issues that impact the Diaspora.

MISSION STATEMENT

Our mission is to offer working journalists, our colleagues in related fields and students, a source of support and recognition, a forum for networking with the Caribbean region and its Diaspora and to serve as a clearinghouse for ongoing journalism jobs and education.
